12	The purpose of these meetings is to help graduate students (all levels) to improve their skills in reading early French through practical, 'hands-on' translation sessions involving a range of materials (requests for specific texts may be accommodated, subject to negotiation). Prior experience of early French is not a prerequisite, but those attending are expected to engage in prescribed preparatory work, including translation of source texts and consultation of grammar guides and dictionaries. Interested parties are asked to apprise Dr Burrows (daron.burrows@spc.ox.ac.uk) of their intention to attend before term begins, in order to facilitate practical arrangements.
13	To be confirmed
14	Tea served from 4.45pm. All DPhil students are welcome to attend, at any stage of the year, whatever year they are in, and whether or not they attended in previous terms or years. We discuss a wide range of problems, techniques, and methods that tend to arise in the researching and the writing of the kinds of doctorates done within the Faculty (with the exception of linguistics, to which the workshop is less well geared). Apart from perhaps giving a very brief presentation during the year, students do no preparation: they just turn up.
