1.3 Oxford Italian Play: Fiabe Italiane

Burton Taylor Studio, Tues 8th - Sat 12th March (8th week), 9.30-10.30pm

Building on the success of last year's inaugural Italian play, this year we are pleased to announce an exciting adaptation of short fairy tales from Italo Calvino's landmark 1956 collection "Fiabe Italiane". This sixty-minute, fast-paced original production has been lovingly created by the student team behind last year's first ever (sell-out!) Italian play "Serata Futurista". Performed by students of Italian and lovers of Italian theatre, the show is a spirited tour of regional folk culture with stories of love, trickery, danger, death, and the beautiful endurance of life. Lovers of fairy tales will adore these stories as they're brought to life in their original language. Italian language skills are not required, however: summaries in English will be provided.

We warmly invite you to join us for this fun evening of Italian culture and entertainment!

Tickets are £6, or £5 for students/concessions, and can be bought online:

1.11 Cultural Economies and the Contemporary Moment Workshop

17 March, 9.30 am – 6.30 pm. Taylor Institution, St Giles, Oxford, OX1 3NA. Room 2
17 March, 7 pm. Modern Art Oxford, 30 Pembroke Street, Oxford, OX1 1BP
18 March, 10.30 am – 6.30 pm. Oxford Martin Centre, 34 Broad Street, Oxford, OX1 3BD

A programme of events exploring the relationship between culture and the economy organized by the Faculty of Medieval and Modern Languages, University of Oxford

Convenors: Dimitris Papanikolaou (Modern Greek) and Catriona Kelly (Russian)

How should we understand the relationship between culture, economics, politics, and society? How does this relationship shift according to different historical conjunctures? How meaningful are terms such as "stagnation" and "crisis" when applied to cultural forms? Are the classic theories that attempt to relate "base" to "superstructure" or "economic, social, political capital" to "cultural capital" still compelling? These are some of the general issues that this programme of events sets out to examine. Two countries under focus are Russia and Greece, both sometimes considered as marginal to the European project and in some respects defined and self-defined against it, yet both recognizably "European" in terms of their history and (in a global context) "Western". Moreover, these two sites of investigation bring into sharp focus issues such as the state's involvement in, and withdrawal from, cultural management, and the impact of sudden liquidity and of austerity politics on cultural production and on social relations. Two all-day symposiums and a public lecture present leading experts across a wide disciplinary range, and including writers and curators as well as academics, to address compelling issues of our times.

For full programme, please visit <http://www.mod-langs.ox.ac.uk/events/events2016-cultural-economies-contemporary-moment> and see the attached flyer.

Admission to all events is free; registration requested to Marina Samsonova marina.samsonova@mod-langs.ox.ac.uk.

'Violence and the Social Unconscious: Overcoming or not Overcoming the Individual/Social Distinction'

Abstract:

It has been argued that psychosocial studies refutes the separation of the psychic and social and rejects the idea that inner and outer worlds are empirically or theoretically separable. By contrast, critical theory emphasises how false theoretical standards are true in the sense of reflecting social reality: "False consciousness is also true: inner and outer life are torn apart" (Adorno 1967). Thus false beliefs are materially realised in a wrong reality. This paper questions how the claim of a non-separation of psychic and social reality is to be understood and how it may be reconciled with a critique of violence, a project that appears to demand that these concepts must be and cannot be held together. I shall outline some premises for an asymmetrical understanding of the social unconscious.

1.17 Workshop: Religion, Social Action & Urban Policy: London & Paris face to face

This comparative trans-disciplinary workshop, which will be held in Paris on 17 March 2016, brings together on-the-ground actors and researchers to investigate the formation of urban communities. The workshop focuses, in particular, on faith-based initiatives aimed at increasing local resources and individual aspirations and growth, and explores the ways in which these initiatives engage with local government and the state more broadly.

The day-long set of talks, debates and Q&A sessions will focus on how religious leadership and civic actors play a role in social action and gauge the extent to which the supposed different models of secularism and religious diversity in the UK and France enable or infringe upon community-local government dialogue. Conceptually, the talks will analyse the significance of trust and faith within civil society in relation to structural change across both countries and in a context of heightened insecurity and economic uncertainty.

The event, which will be held in Paris on 17 March 2016, is free to all but it is necessary to register: contact Dr Samuel Everett at se365@cam.ac.uk

2.3 Women’s Responses to the Reformation

Oxford, 23 June 2016 (all day)

Proposals are invited for a workshop on women’s responses to the Reformation in June 2016, sponsored by the Women in the Humanities Programme (TORCH).

The 500th anniversary of Martin Luther’s 95 Theses is fast approaching. The University of Oxford has begun preparations to mark this key event in European history, some of which are centred on the Taylor Institution’s collection of Lutheran pamphlets. This workshop focuses specifically on how women from all walks of life, and from across Europe and beyond, responded to the events of the Reformation. In particular, we are interested in exploring women’s cultural and written responses. We are delighted that Professor Ulrike Strasser (UC San Diego) will speak on gender and the Jesuit missions in the Marianas Islands as part of the workshop.

The organisers hope to attract proposals from early career researchers (postgraduate students and postdoctoral researchers) in particular, and seek participation from a broad disciplinary spectrum.

Proposals for papers should include the name, affiliation and contact details (including email address) for all authors, as well as a brief (max. 200 words) abstract and paper title. Please send all proposals to women.and.the.reformation@gmail.com by 1 April 2016. All general inquiries should be sent to the same address.

Possible topics could include:

2.4 Connected Life 2016: Collective Action and the Internet

The Connected Life 2016 team cordially invites you to submit proposals to participate in our conference at the Oxford Internet Institute (Oxford University), on the 20th and 21st of June. The deadline is April 3rd. Connected Life is student-run, and dedicated to sparking exchange between disciplines and showcasing emerging Internet research. We welcome students and faculty from all universities and departments.

This year's theme is Collective Action and the Internet. The Conference explores how the Internet affects collective action; both in big social movements, such as the Arab Spring and the Hong Kong Protests, and in more everyday forms of collaboration. Beyond submissions on the theme, we warmly welcome any social science topic related to the Internet.

Our call for papers can be found here: <http://connectedlife.oii.ox.ac.uk/2016conference/call-for-papers/>. If you have any questions or wish to get in touch, please contact connectedlife@oii.ox.ac.uk or visit our website: <http://connectedlife.oii.ox.ac.uk>.

We look forward to receiving and reviewing your submissions,

Wybo Wiersma, Bertie Vidgen & Ilinca Barsan

2.5 Everywhere and Nowhere: An Interdisciplinary Postgraduate Symposium on Imagined Spaces

Call for Papers for the tenth annual postgraduate workshop run by the Landscape, Space, Place Research Group at the University of Nottingham.

Monday 20th June 2016, University of Nottingham

Keynote Speaker: Professor Stephen Daniels (University of Nottingham)

Imagined spaces are engaged with on a daily basis, whether they be in the novels we read, the news reports we hear, or in the forthcoming development posters we see around our towns and cities. These imagined spaces are multiple and mutable, coming into conflict with one another and the values they embody. With the physical and imaginary both influencing one another, imagined spaces have a diverse and meaningful impact on lived experience, affecting the way we conceive of and interact with the places and landscapes around us.

This symposium aims to emphasize the role of the imagination in the representation of space and place and to explore the ways these imagined spaces engage with and shape 'real' spaces and identities. We welcome papers that engage with imagination and space in a broad sense, across historical periods and disciplinary boundaries.

Papers are invited on – but are by no means limited to – the following themes:

Maps and the translation of place

The colonial and post-colonial imagination of space and place

Speculative, fantasy, and alternative spaces

Dramatic, literary and artistic imaginings of space and place

Nostalgia and the memory of landscape and place

Landscape design and city planning

The influence of technology on conceptualizing space and place

Theoretical approaches to the imagination of space

This is a one-day, interdisciplinary symposium that seeks to offer postgraduate students an opportunity to present related work at any stage of their research in a friendly and supportive environment. It is the tenth annual postgraduate workshop to be run by the Landscape, Space and Place Research Group and hosted by the Schools of English and Geography at the University of Nottingham.

Abstracts invited of 250-300 words for 20 minute papers from all current postgraduate students. Please send, along with a short biography, to lsp-group@nottingham.ac.uk by Friday 22nd April.
