

Graduate Admissions Selection Criteria for St Cross College

- Applicants must first have been accepted by a Department or Faculty of the University of Oxford before any college or permanent private hall may consider them.
- Applications are considered for any of the courses in which the College offers admission. Please consult your course page to ensure the College offers admission.
- Applications are usually considered by the Senior Tutor/Tutor for Admissions.
- Preference may be given to applicants whose area of study overlaps with the academic interests of the College's Fellows, details of which are available here.
- The College aims to admit a certain number of graduate students each year spread across the range of subjects in which it accepts graduate students, and this will determine the number of offers which can be made to applicants. Where there are more applicants than offers which can be made, the relative academic merit and potential of the applicants will be taken into account. It may not be possible to make offers to applicants whose applications are received late in the admissions round when places are full.
- The possession of competitively-won funding may be taken into account as an indicator of the applicant's academic merit and potential.
- The final decision on whether to offer a place in the light of the overall competition for graduate places and the spread of those places across subject areas is usually taken by the Senior Tutor/Tutor for Admissions.
- Please note that any offer of a place will be subject to satisfactory completion of the financial declaration form that will be sent to the applicant as part of the offer of a place. Please consult the University's guidance for more details.
An offer of a College place will also be conditional on the applicant fulfilling the University's published academic and English Language Qualification requirements.
- Preference may be given to current or past students of the College and to applicants who have expressed a preference for the College, who meet the selection criteria described above.
